CHAPTER 27 New World

BECAUSE Ann and Todd had asked her for dinner, Melissa felt a little better. Melissa was almost passionately grateful for Todd and Ann's arrival, and went down to meet them in the lobby of her hotel.

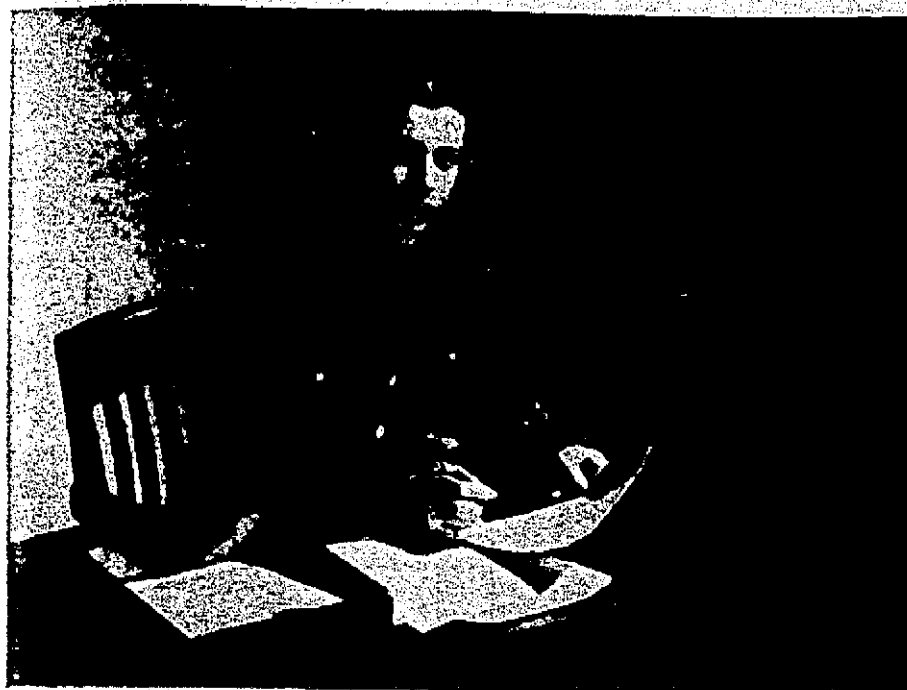

From the sidewalk it was a simple matter to find the hotel. Todd and Ann were obviously expecting her, for they were greeted by name, and a head waiter in the garb of a concierge, guided them to a table placed at the edge of the serenade floor.

"This," Todd told them all, "is the dance I've been looking for. The music changed, quickening its tempo, and out on the floor drifted a rather tall, fair-looking girl and a man a little taller than she. Their dance was elegant, gay, fantastic—out of the first started in a moment.

Everybody Thinks So

MOST readers don't think about this, but historians are written by individuals. The individuals, of course, have the standard assortment of individual ideas. Here is one of those ideas submitted in the belief that everybody thinks so and the powers that be in Washington should be doing something about it.

This war is being run too much like a voice and not enough like a chattering. There is too much talk about difficulties and not enough talk about success. "Oh for pity's sake!" needs to be ash-canned in favor of "Come on, let's give 'em the other barrel!"

Twenty-four hours a day, day in and day out, there's a sound of clanking machinery being put into motion to the accompaniment of squeals and wails because it either won't put into motion before, or because now that it's in motion it isn't running faster. There needs to be more cheering going on about the fact that things are moving a whole of a lot faster than anybody dared to think they would be moving by this time—and that the American juggernaut is only just beginning to roll.

In fact, what this country needs is some more parades, some more slogans and some more confidence. Americans are tired of talking about plumes over colorful speculations about what Hitler is going to do next. They think that what Hitler and Hirohito and all the other throat-grabbers are going to do next is realize they underestimated the United States and are going to get it in the neck.

This might be called whistling in the dark. That's what the dyspeptics and the Japanese propagandists would call it, and it's their business to give the dyspeptics the dope most likely to sour their already tender tumblers. But of course it's not whistling in the dark. It's nothing but the thing any normal human being wants to do when there's a big job to do. He wants to tackle it in the right frame of mind.

Goose pimples aren't the right frame of mind for the job of putting the fill on the rodents that have gauged up to put human beings in cages and the rats on the outside. The right frame of mind is a clenched fist. That's what Americans are thinking and their government can help them along. Certainly the task is going to be tough. To be sure, things aren't going as smoothly as they might go. There's no question about the danger entailed. The other side might win; that's always a possibility in war. But it doesn't help any to keep harping on it.

Americans didn't want war; they made no bones about it when they were preaching peace and they're making no bones about it now that they're getting into condition to fight. They do feel—and this is still an individual opinion being stretched into a generalization—that since they must fight they'd prefer to fight with a flourish. And that's where the government comes in.

One of its big men, Donald Nelson, showed the way a few days ago by making an optimistic report on production. It was a report that confirmed what millions of Americans know from personal observation: That this country is barreling out war material at a prodigious and constantly increasing rate. For a change, it might be nice to hear that someone in Washington is thinking about something besides how to avert inflation, or shift the blame to somebody else for not planting rubber trees, or keep the dear dear people from knowing what the enemy already knows.

It's a frame of mind more than anything else. One man's guess is that if President Roosevelt would jot down on a pad some morning, "I suggest that every government spokesman begin thinking and talking about victory with a capital V," and make sure that everybody gets a copy, the war effort would spruce up 50 per cent inside of two weeks. This country is tired of singing and listening to the blues. It's in a fight and intends to make the most of it.

The American way of fighting never yet has called for spoiling the fun by brooding over the thing blew by blow.

Prudence Would Have Been Better

UNDER the lash of necessity a great many things, such as turning back empty tubes made partly of tin, are being done that might have been done long before this. For instance, enforcement officials claim they now are going to enforce 40-mile speed limits to save tires, though it usually was rejected as impossible to enforce higher limits to save life.

War makes all things possible. No expense is too great, no economy too small. While prudence would have seemed to be better in many cases than desperation, growing out of an almost total disregard of prudence, it is only second-guessing to say anything about that. With a sorrowing thought for all the tooth paste and shaving cream tubes that might have been salvaged in years past to avert a tin shortage in 1942, patriots now will save them in the future—will save them or won't be able to renew their supply at the drug store. It's war, and there's a lot of ground to be made up that never would have been lost if prudence had been the best policy before war began.

News Behind the News

U. S. Flying Fortress Beats Off 27 Jap
Pursuit Planes, Shooting Down 12.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 3—A lone American flying fortress met 27 Zero fighters of the Japs at low altitude the other day. That meant curtains for the fortress.

The Zero naval pursuit plane is the best ship the Japs have, and one of the best in the business. It can climb faster than our standard pursuit ship, the P-40, and has greater maneuverability. To get this superiority, it has sacrificed armor so that if you hit one, you are apt to collect.

But when 27 of these speedy fighters catch one lumbering big bomber, the fight is supposed to be over before it starts. This is especially true at low altitudes where the greater maneuverability of the Zero has full play. The fortress generally tries to escape by going higher than the Zero can climb.

Nothing could be done this time, except fight it out. Every body stayed around as long as his ammunition lasted or until he dropped. When the last bullet had been fired, the flying fortress went on home, counting 12 Jap planes missing from the squadron of 27.

In an encounter against impossible odds, it actually shot down nearly half the enemy planes and escaped.

Bomber's Superiority

Nothing could better tell superiority of our big bomber, the type of ship best suited to the long haul of the Far East. It is proving its name. Its armament seems to have made it invulnerable to the explosive type of bullet which the Jap favor.

The Zeiss can theoretically shoot it down. They carry 50 caliber machine guns and a 20 mm. cannon. But they must get it in the right spots. They have an idea that if they can get on top of it they have it at their mercy. But getting on top is difficult in view of the loftier range of the fortress.

Hitler's New Plans

Hitler has a new task. At least he is selling it as new to his admirers. Fact is, he has merely made a few additions or corrections in his old medium model, without changing the model.

First War Correspondent

An Irishman Started Something.

WILLIAM HOWARD RUSSELL, born in Jobstown, Ireland, in 1820, is believed to be the first of the war correspondents—those hardy journalists who tell the adventurous stories of battles and campaigns.

Russell's family had moved to Dublin and when he was 21 a cousin helped him get a job on the London Times. The Times, wanting coverage on the general election of Sir Robert Peel's party sent him home to Ireland, where he visited hospitals, knowing he would find most of the political leaders there. He interviewed them on their beds of pain and patriotism.

His next assignment also was in Ireland, this time reporting the famine for the Morning Chronicle. His first war correspondence was written in 1850 when he was with the Danish army in Schleswig-Holstein. In 1854, he was off to join the British expedition in the Crimea, arriving there at his dreary dinner with Thackeray, Dickens and Disraeli.

"As British officers never before had seen a war correspondent," reports Goldfish Bowl, publication of National Press Club, Washington, D. C., "they were unable to understand his presence with the troops and his facilities were provided. He had to buy his own food and cook it and pitch his own tent, but the army did find out what such a correspondent was when his dispatches began to appear in the Times."

Russell saw the chance of the light brigade, later to be immortalized by Tennyson, and his report of its futility and army conditions and strategy won for him so much attention at home that he began to be taken seriously in all quarters. Russell was famous after the peace, he mingled with the Russians. At home in London he was credited with saving the British army by letting the people, the parliament and the government know about its weaknesses.

He next went to India to cover the mutiny. He wrote the story of the Black Hole of Calcutta. In 1860 he founded the Army and Navy Journal and between foreign assignments devoted himself to its publication. On March 18, 1861, he landed at New York. In Washington, he met Secretary of State Seward. His dispatches about conditions in the capital attracted wide attention. President Lincoln told him that the Times of London had more power than anything he knew of, save the Mississippi river. The Times was friendly to the Confederacy, so Russell went south; he was convinced the Confederacy would win. But his convictions were too strong for his judgment, and his dispatches began to decline. He returned to England.

In 1866, Russell covered the decisive battle of Sedan, when 210,000 Prussians defeated 220,000

There of the improvements are important. The firepower has been stepped up from 37 mm. to 50 mm. A flame thrower has been added to the equipment, no doubt to catch those Russian guerrillas who are always prowling around at night, tossing viols of explosives. Also he has added armor in front, so the tank can take greater blows from straight ahead.

Gone is the day when Hitler's new weapons cast fear. He conceived this war and secretly built slightly better weapons than he thought he would have to encounter at the outset.

But now everybody knows his secrets, and in the course of conflict his opposition has improved its weapons constantly beyond his. What we have added to the flying fortress, for instance, is what has made it superior to any long range bomber. No one can change models radically now, without throwing his production line out of gear. The day of surprises is vanishing. The mechanical basis of the war has been set.

From now on it will be a war of mass production and improvement. No plan has ever been better than the United States at that game.

Ceylon Attack

The sensational Jap raid on Ceylon has been over-interpreted sometimes as preliminary to invasion of India. Its limited objective was somewhat like that of Pearl Harbor.

When the Japs took Java, the British and Dutch sent their ships to Ceylon, a military move. The Japs were not long discovering we sent ours out to Australia, as they also well know.

The 75 Jap planes went into Colombo from two or three aircraft carriers which had sneaked up southward of Ceylon. They were seeking the British and Dutch naval fighting ships from Java.

Also the British apparently were building some ship facilities there on the inner shore of Ceylon, more than 100 miles away from their established but more exposed naval base at Trincomalee.

In one respect the attack was different from Pearl Harbor. The British picked up news of the Japs coming by scouting or detectors and were ready for them.

First War Correspondent

An Irishman Started Something.

WILLIAM HOWARD RUSSELL, born in Jobstown, Ireland, in 1820, is believed to be the first of the war correspondents—those hardy journalists who tell the adventurous stories of battles and campaigns.

Russell's family had moved to Dublin and when he was 21 a cousin helped him get a job on the London Times. The Times, wanting coverage on the general election of Sir Robert Peel's party sent him home to Ireland, where he visited hospitals, knowing he would find most of the political leaders there. He interviewed them on their beds of pain and patriotism.

His next assignment also was in Ireland, this time reporting the famine for the Morning Chronicle. His first war correspondence was written in 1850 when he was with the Danish army in Schleswig-Holstein. In 1854, he was off to join the British expedition in the Crimea, arriving there at his dreary dinner with Thackeray, Dickens and Disraeli.

"As British officers never before had seen a war correspondent," reports Goldfish Bowl, publication of National Press Club, Washington, D. C., "they were unable to understand his presence with the troops and his facilities were provided. He had to buy his own food and cook it and pitch his own tent, but the army did find out what such a correspondent was when his dispatches began to appear in the Times."

Russell saw the chance of the light brigade, later to be immortalized by Tennyson, and his report of its futility and army conditions and strategy won for him so much attention at home that he began to be taken seriously in all quarters. Russell was famous after the peace, he mingled with the Russians. At home in London he was credited with saving the British army by letting the people, the parliament and the government know about its weaknesses.

He next went to India to cover the mutiny. He wrote the story of the Black Hole of Calcutta. In 1860 he founded the Army and Navy Journal and between foreign assignments devoted himself to its publication. On March 18, 1861, he landed at New York. In Washington, he met Secretary of State Seward. His dispatches about conditions in the capital attracted wide attention. President Lincoln told him that the Times of London had more power than anything he knew of, save the Mississippi river. The Times was friendly to the Confederacy, so Russell went south; he was convinced the Confederacy would win. But his convictions were too strong for his judgment, and his dispatches began to decline. He returned to England.

In 1866, Russell covered the decisive battle of Sedan, when 210,000 Prussians defeated 220,000

000 Austrians, the hegemony of Europe passing thereby from Austria to Prussia, paving the way for Kaiser Wilhelm and World War I and, indirectly, for Adolf Hitler and World War II. In 1870, Russell took the field again; both the Germans and French had invited him to join their armies, but he chose the Prussians because he thought they would win. He was right. Later, he retired from the Times to devote all his efforts to the Army and Navy Journal, but in 1879 he accepted the Daily Telegraph's invitation to go to South Africa to cover the Zulu war.

In 1907, at the age of 87, he died in London. His bust in St. Paul's bears the inscription.

CHICKENS DON'T COME HOME TO ROOST

Echo from Distant Day of Real Orators

The Gentleman Was Out of Order, but His Imagination Worked Fine

THE Goldfish Bowl, publication of the National Press Club in Washington, D. C., offers the following example of oratory in its heyday to prove to speakers they hardly can expect to beat the old timers at the game of confusing the issue with words. The orator was a certain Gen. Riley, reports Goldfish Bowl, and the issue was the Missouri compromise. The scene was the Missouri house of representatives.

Gen. Riley "Mr. Speaker everybody is pitching into this matter like lead frogs into a yellow swamp on a lovely evening in the balmy month of June when the mellow light of the full moon fills with a delicious flood the thin, ethereal, atmosphere air. Sir, I want to put in a word. There seems to be a disposition to fight. I say if there is any fighting to be done, come on with your corn cobs and lightning bugs. In the language of the ancient Romans—

"Come one, come all, this rock shall fly from its firm base—in a pig's eye."

"Now there has been a great deal of bombast here today. I call it bombast from Alpha to Omega. (I don't understand the meaning of the words, though). Sir, the question to refer is a great and magnificent question. It is an all-absorbing question—like a sponge, or a large, immeasurable, sponge of globe shape in a small tumbler of water. It sucks up everything. Sir, I stand here with the weapons I have designated to defend the rights of St. Louis county, the rights of any other county, even the county of Cedar itself. Sir, the debate has assumed a latitudinosity. We have had a little black-lack buncombe, a little two-bit buncombe, a little black-lack buncombe, a little two-bit buncombe, a little black-lack buncombe, and the devil and his grandmother know what other kind of buncombe."

"Whir, sir, just give some of 'em a little southern soap and a little northern water and quicker than a hound pup can lick a skillet they will make enough buncombe lather to wash the golden flock that roams abroad the azure meads of heaven. I allude to the starchy firmament."

The speaker: "The gentleman is out of order. He must confine himself to the question."

WHEREUPON Gen. Riley ceased his oration.

"Just retain your line, if you please," he thundered, "I'll stick to the text as close as a pitchfork for which they died denoted by plaster to a pine plank or a lean pig to a hot jam rock. I want to say to these canorous gentlemen, these ignominious individuals, these detestable demonstrators, these execrable volubiles, come on with your combustibles. If I don't—well, I'll suck the Gulf of Mexico through a goose quill. Perhaps you think I am diminutive tubers and sparse in a mundane elevation. You may discover, gentlemen, you are laboring under as great a misapprehension as though you had ingested your inner vestment. In the language of the noble bard—

"I was not born in a thicket to be scared by a cricket."

"Sir, we have lost our proper position. Our proper position is the zenith and the nadir—our heads at right angles to the horizon, at right angles to the horizon spanned by the azure arc of the lustrous firmament, bright with the constellations of innumerable constellations and proud as a speckled stud horse on a county court day."

"But how have the mighty fallen, in the language of the poet Silversmith. We have lost our proper position. We have assumed a sloshinducular or a diarrhoeological position. And what is the cause? Echo answers 'Buncombe.' Sir, 'Buncombe.' The people have been fed on buncombe while a lot of spavined, ring-boned, ham-strung, wind-called, come-eyed, split-hooved, distempered, polt-eviled, pot-bellied politicians have had their noses in the public crib and there ain't fodder enough left to make a cruet for a sick grasshopper!"

"Mr. Speaker, you must excuse me for my latitudinosity and circumlocution. My old blunder-bus, old blunder-bus, if anybody gets peppered it ain't my fault if they are in the way."

"Sir, these candid, super-spiritual, mahogany-faced gentry, what do they know about the blessings of freedom? About as much as a lead frog does of high glory. Do they think they can escape me? I'll follow them through pandemonium and high water."

THEN, at long last, came the peroration.

"These are the ones that have got our liberty people off its perpendicularity. To they who would rend the Stars and Stripes, that noble flag, the blood of our Revolutionary fathers embalmied in its red, the purity of the cause for which they died denoted by the white, the blue, freedom, they attained like the azure air that wraps their native hills and lingers on their lovely plains."

"The high bird liberty sits perched on the topmost branch, but there is no secession salt on its glorious tail. I fear he will no more spread his noble pinions to soar beyond the azure regions of the boreal pole. But let not Missouri pull the last feather from his sheltering wing to plume a shaft to pierce his noble breast; or what is the same, make a pen to sign a secession ordinance. Aias, poor bird, if they drive you from the branches of the hemlock of the north and the palmetto of the south, come over to the gum tree of the west and will protect your noble birdship while water grows and grass runs."

It was Friday, April 8, 1932. State Welfare Director John McWeeney announced that Mrs. Louise Mitendorf would be retained as superintendent of the state reformatory at Marysville.

Hoke Donithen, Marion attorney, continued to gain a Grant hospital in Columbus following a major operation.

Commandation by national leaders in the "war against the depression" campaign was given Marion's job drive, which has already produced 110,000 work hours. "You citizens are certainly doing a wonderful job," the executive director of the American Legion's national employment commission said in a letter to J. W. Lewellyn, commander of the Marion Legion.

Mrs. Chris Bennett, 23, of near Fulton, Morrow county, was killed in an automobile accident near Marengo.

Miss Leola Chick was hostess to the H. and H. club at her home on North High street.

Members of the Mozart Musical Musketiers gave a program of piano and vocal numbers at the Waddell Ladies Home. Taking part were Gene Roberts, Adeline Hecker, Patricia and Myrtle Huk, Albert Truss, Betty Roberts, Carroll Schmidt, Sam Pruzzo and Miss Mildred Duffey. The entertainers were music pupils of Miss Duffey.

It was Saturday, April 6, 1922. Winds of cyclonic velocity accompanied by violent rainstorms swept north Texas and southern Oklahoma, claiming about 25 persons and causing immense property loss.

Members of the Marion Athletic association arranged to stage a boxing show May 1. A report on the preceding show was made by Roy Abel.

Joshua M. Corbin, 58, of near Azosta died at City hospital.

Announcement was made by W. B. Bliss of Columbus, assistant to the state superintendent of public instruction, that the high school charter for the Azosta centralized school had been taken away. Azosta residents said the only reason given by Mr. Bliss was alleged lack of cooperation on the part of the school.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Merle McCombs of Uncapher avenue.

John W. Severns, 45, died at his home on Blaine avenue.

Announcement was made that the Murdoch Dishwashing Machinery Co., recently incorporated, would occupy the building and property on Lincoln avenue formerly used by the Heuchter Sully Co. and later by the Cathedral Phonograph Co. Management of the new company was to be in charge of H. A. Wekinon of Bucyrus. Fred S. Scherff was secretary of the company.

Use the Oldies

By DAMON RUNYON

Volunteer Civilians Could Do Work in Washington and Give Youngsters More Action.

LOS ANGELES—All right, all of us old of from 45 to 65 will register for the month and then what will happen? Well, we will get you that if any are active and assigned it will be to plugging about 90 miles short of the real capability of the old uns, while young squirts fully qualified for field service will remain in desk jobs would be more competently discharged the vets.

Before the registration of the oldest even thought of, thousands of gentlemen smooth on the town but filled with patriotism and desire to do something, offering services to various departments of the government, only to be brushed off with scanty money.

Many never received answers to their letters. We judge from letters that have come since our first article on this subject. Of course we realize that the governmental department have been quite busy since the war started answering letters takes time, yet a little more and filling on the voluntary offers have answered some of the very purposes of coming registration.

AMONG those who presented themselves without receiving any consideration men whose services would probably be considered cheap at any price by private corporations. When the government can get this type it seems idle to quibble about minor points as age, number of teeth and measurements as long as the needles are.

It would most certainly be silly to put these type to guarding culverts or to other consequential duties while young fellows, civilians (they were called "swifliers" in last war) or in the service, are occupying positions that could be handled by the chaps.

There are hundreds of thousands of men their fifties and sixties who might not be to carrying a rifle and pack but who are able physically and mentally of taking on the numerous jobs now held by young. It is a waste of man power not to release latter to the combat divisions.

The American Legion alone could furnish an enormous number of hale and hearty ex-soldiers whose experience would render them valuable in many positions in Washington elsewhere and even behind the lines. It is out that the government is pinning its faith on army and navy commanders who are near over 50 and some over 60, yet is delegating hazardous duties to youngsters and declaring them not as old as the fighting leaders.

LAWYERS whose judicial experience and temperament could not be reproduced by years of training and practice, business whose acumen in their own fields is peculiar, artisans, mechanics, writers, hundreds of other specialists who happen beyond the age of active service would be to work for the government, if given the chance.

The army needs combat officers more. It does need soldiers. Most likely the 3 men in the service who are assigned to a field, few young soldiers fancy imitating their comrades at the front. Hence replacing of the youngsters by the untried for field duty would probably be well by the kids as well as by the field command.

There is a growing impatience among people whose sons are overseas and in army camps at home about the number young civilians of military age who are doing war jobs of various kinds. In all it should be said that some of these could pass the physical examinations for the navy or the navy and some are indispensable, others may be real emblems.

However, there is just as much impact about young men in the service who are being replaced by the old, highly favored by the planners and the people as come to think that in some cases it is more the incidence that these fortunate lads are connected socially and politically. The so is in this column—replace them all with willing oldies.

War on Tire Bootleggers

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Government officials automobile association leaders are in a huddle over a problem that already has been reported from numerous sections of the country—thief and bootlegging of auto parts, tires even cars.

No sooner had Price Administrator Leon Jaworski announced a campaign of tires, and the curtailed production of replacement parts than the whole country broke out in a rash of petty thievery of tires and parts and rash (already a felony on both state and federal statute books) of cars.

Officials fear that big-time crooks and rascals, taking a page from the days of prohibition, might try to organize the petty thieves rings and by wholesale operations seriously undermine the curtailment program.

Henderson's OPA is interested in the problem in so far as it would, through its political and moral effect on the driving place a stumbling block in the smooth development of tire, car and parts rationing.

Realizing this, the American Automobile Association and several other agencies have urged Henderson to propose a bill to make the theft of tires, parts and accessories a federal offense. Henderson, a leading presidential hopeful, is creating a bootleg market for illicit in these important commodities. This situation will develop into worse proportions if strong measures are taken to counteract it.

This may look fine in print but reducing actual application in everyday prosecutive community and state offenders is another matter. To make the theft of tires, parts a federal offense when committed in intrastate traffic would require a constitutional amendment. The only comparable one we have in Constitution now is that applying to narcotic school law.

I don't think the AAA or any other organization or agency really hopes to see any law passed which would eliminate this against one of the all-out war measures.

What they do hope and expect is that individual states will take cognizance of the law and pass laws which to make tire and parts hereafter for the most part no more a petty offense, a felony.

The defendants and their attorneys present included the defense attorneys, the government attorneys and the defendants' relatives.

The jury had listened to the testimony of one of the defendants during the trial.

The verdict was read by Judge Howard Parker. He then thanked the jurors for the service they had rendered.

Gov. Nathan G. M. Nevin, who had been present at the trial, said he was proud of the jury's verdict.

The jury was granted a recess.

Gloomy Proceedings

The trial could be seen from a window in the courtroom. The jurors were called in by the judge, while some of the defendants were in the corridors after the session of court was adjourned. An air of forced levity was transformed into a dismal gloom in five minutes.

The jurors shook hands with the judge and with their attorneys. A final recess before the jury returned to the courtroom on Friday morning.

The jury had returned its verdict. Judge Nevin asserted that the jury was correct.

There has been some intimation that this case has been too long. There have been the government attorneys took too long to present its case and some have said that the jury had taken too long in its deliberations.

The jury yielded in the matter of the case because I wanted to see everyone involved had a fair trial. The matter of time is in the hands of the court so with a view of hastening proceedings, I set Friday morning at 9:30 as the time for imposition of sentence.

There will be no further delay. I will consider a motion for a retrial filed in behalf of each of the defendants and at the same time you regard the motion as overruled.

I want you all to come prepared Friday morning with the understanding there will be no act of execution. I've heard the jury has met time too often. I think I've heard it for the last time.

Reviews-Deliberations

Early said that the first day of the jury's deliberations were spent in studying the indictments returned by the federal grand jury several months ago and in listening to the testimony of the defendants and the government attorneys.

"We felt we gave everybody a fair chance and if at any time an element of doubt existed, we weighed in favor of the defense," he said.

Pointing out that there was no danger of a "hung" jury at any time, he said there was no disagreement among the panel except in one instance in a matter pertaining to the indictments. The jury attended the trial 12 work days, he recalled adding.

"We didn't lose 30 minutes' time since we received the case. It was the hardest job I ever had. I haven't slept a wink for three nights and haven't eaten since Monday noon."

Jurors Nervous

He complimented the other 11 jurors on their sincerity in deliberations. All were highly nervous as they finished their work, exchanging a trial which produced a verdict of testimony taken from the mouths of witnesses. One, when asked how he felt to be done with the trial, replied:

"I don't know—we haven't been out yet."

During the trial U. S. District

Attorney Calvin Crawford of Dayton charged the company received $1,334,000 from investors for promises of 25 to 100 per cent returns. He said a total of $5,165,000 was promised investors but that they actually received $803,350.

A score of defense attorneys, headed by Lieut. Gov. Paul Herbert, sought to show that the sales agency, established in 1933, would have kept promises to investors if a receivership suit had not been filed against it in 1935.

The government charged the defendants accepted money from investors, many of them elderly persons, on the promise they would reap large dividends.

Indicted in 1940

Originally, 44 were indicted by the grand jury at Columbus on Nov. 23, 1940. Since the trial started Sept. 23, 1941, four have died, two entered nolle prosequere pleas, one was continued because of ill health, one pleaded guilty and the case of one was dismissed.

Those who died were O. C. Young, Granville; R. E. Sanborn, Cleveland; Lloyd M. Stump and L. D. Jones of Columbus.

Nolle prosequere pleas were by Ray Freshner, Lakeview, and L. C. O'Connor, Toledo.

The case of E. C. Kinney of Columbus was continued because of ill health.

William J. Payne of Cleveland pleaded guilty, and A. G. Stephan of Newark was freed.

Shortly after the trial began last fall, the court provided buses and trips were made to the three cemetery developments, Forest Glen in Marion, Glen Rest in Columbus and Glen Haven in Springfield, so that the jury could gain first-hand information about the three parks.

The government's case was conducted by United States District Attorney Calvin Crawford, assisted by U. S. Attorneys Ray J. O'Donnell and Robert E. Marshall.

Also aiding the government were U. S. Postal Inspectors Dennis O'Brien, Harry Schmidt, Walter Johnson, J. W. Thompson and S. E. Siegfried.

121 U. S. Witnesses

During the first four months of the trial the government presented 121 witnesses whose testimony required 59 trial days.

Through testimony and by the introduction of thousands of exhibits, part of which were taken from the files of Forest Glen, Inc., the government stated that the company received $1,334,000 from investors during the four-and-one-half years of operations.

The government also sought to prove that the "majority" of investment sales were made to persons "who could not qualify as good, sound business people," Crawford claimed the aged, the infirm, widows and persons not accustomed to the ways of business methods were induced to invest their life's savings into the plan.

Marshall, vice president and general manager of Forest Glen, Inc., was the only defendant to take the stand.

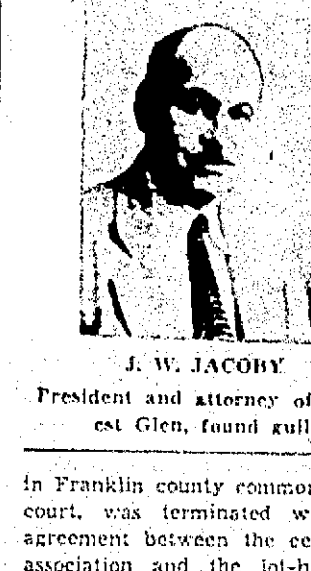

Mr. Marshall, on the stand for 16 days under direct and cross examination, testified that his firm sought to provide a "good, decent burial place for the poor at a reasonable price."

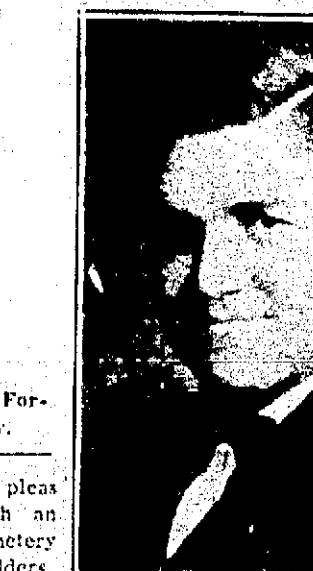

Above are shown members of the Forest Glen trial jury as they appeared in federal court at Columbus shortly after the panel was completed early in the trial. Left to right, front row, are Henry J. Miller, 51, Canal Winchester, farmer, alternate; Frank Wilson, 55, Cambridge, steel worker; Joseph Donovan, 36, Cardington, trucker; Bernard Schwartz, 26, Lowell, Washington county, farmer; Frank Sherman, 35, Cardington, furniture salesman, and Allen Kulp, 33, London, insurance salesman. Back row, left to right are J. Floyd Cady, 39, Newport, Washington county, farm implement salesman and foreman of the jury; Chester A. McPeck, 39, Cadiz, farmer; Paul J. Harding High Shop
NOW ON FULL TIME
Operating 24 Hours a Day,
Seven Days a Week.

The vocational shop at Harding High school is now officially an all out for defense school. Starting this week and continuing for the duration the shop will train men for defense work 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Approval of the new schedule was granted by the national defense training advisory board in a recent meeting. Members of the board are George Turner and Ben Ward, representing industry; James Lams of the C.I.O.; Ray Beverly of the A.F.L.-L.M.W.A.; of Columbus; district WPA director Fred Scheriff; the U. S. employment bureau; Supt. P. E. Baker, chairman of the board and vocational education coordinator.

Registration for classes under the new schedule has been divided into two divisions—pre-employment and supplementary classes.

Pre-employment classes are made up in the main of unemployed men. If not enough unemployed men apply for instruction, Mr. Scheriff's office will assign men to the classes. Those in the supplementary classes will come from industrial concerns, where a strong advancement in industrial fields may apply.

For the present only machine shop and welding courses will be offered, Mr. Rieker said. There will be no charge for instruction in either course.

Women applicants will be accepted as well as men. Minimum age for the courses is 18. Mr. Baker said that persons unemployed or in a non-defense industry are urged to enroll.

Spanish firms have begun training civilians to support the motor buses and several of the cars have been repaired.

FOREST GLEN

Early in 1938 a group of lot-holders of the subsidiary cemetery associations; represented by Ben F. Levinson of Columbus, brought action seeking the appointment of a receiver for Forest Glen, Inc., ousting its trustees and the return of cemetery funds held by it to the cemetery. He alleged that all profits the operating cemeteries took 10 per cent for maintenance and that the remaining 90 per cent went to the parent organization.

While the suit was pending, Forest Glen, Inc., sought to file a bankruptcy application with the federal court in Toledo. Gilbert Bettman, former Ohio attorney general, represented Forest Glen, Inc. He told the federal court that if the bankruptcy application was granted regulations would be changed so lot holders could choose their own trustees. A new contract would be drafted between the parent organization and its subsidiaries and purchase of lots for investment would not be allowed.

The receivership action, brought

In Franklin county common pleas court, was terminated with an agreement between the cemetery association and the lot-holders.

There followed the election of new trustees for Forest Glen Memorial park and the announcement that a similar procedure would be taken in the case of the cemetery associations at Columbus and Springfield.

Mr. Levinson, counsel for the lot-holders, reported at the time that efforts would be made to set up funds in each association to buy back lots which were sold for investment purposes. Most of these were sold on an installment basis and there was reportedly $650,000 in accounts receivable due Forest Glen, Inc. These accounts subsequently were turned over to the associations as a result of the court agreement.

Trustee Named

There followed the appointment of Paul D. Smith of Marion as trustee in bankruptcy for Forest Glen, Inc. He brought action in federal court for the recovery of the $650,000 in assets, which he charged were transferred to the three cemetery associations. He contended that the parent company turned over the accounts but the three parks did not assume the liabilities of the parent.

Following a court order, the Marion park association turned over to Forest Glen, Inc., its assets for subsequent determination of rights and the local park was named as co-defendant in the trustee's action merely as a technicality to give the court full jurisdiction. Hearing on Mr. Smith's pleading in federal court was held before Walter S. Jackson of Lima.

Federal Probe

During the months of litigation Marshall was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses by Kenton residents. The charge, later was dismissed and subsequently Marshall brought action against a group, alleging their suits had "undermined and destroyed" public faith in the business of the cemetery associations. He asked $1,150,000 in damages. He also brought action for $100,000 against the Kenton residents on the grounds that he was defamed and imprisoned without cause as the result of their action.

CANNED FOOD PRICE CUT IS FORECAST

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., April 8.—That household "necessities" will be cheaper, somewhat, in June because of high prices on certain canned goods, may be needed for a comeback.

Charles W. Hawk of Ohio State university, after six months in the office of price administration in Washington, expressed today that lower permanent ceilings would be established by April 30 on numerous canned fruits and vegetables.

A total of 18 canned vegetables and 11 canned fruits, including tomatoes, corn, sweet peas, lima beans, green beans, and other vegetables, are being considered for price cuts.

The price cuts would be effective June 1, according to Hawk.

Big Bear Super Market To Be Opened Thursday Morning

Columbus Man To Be Manager of New Food Market on North Main St.; Employees Listed.

Opening of the Big Bear super market at 215 North Main street is scheduled for 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Employees were completing displays today and virtually everything awaited the opening of the store, to be operated by the Miller Stores Co. of Columbus.

The Miller company now operates stores in Columbus, Newark and other central Ohio communities. The Marion store is the first to be opened in the north central Ohio area.

William Apling of Columbus has been named manager. He has already taken up temporary residence here and plans to move his family soon. For the past two and a half years he has been manager of the Lane Avenue Big Bear store in Columbus. At one time this store was considered the largest grocery in the country.

Heads Department

Joe Taylor of Newark will have charge of the produce department in the new store here. He has been in charge of produce in one of the Newark Big Bear markets. Gordon Grobman, who worked under Mr. Apling at the Columbus market, has been placed in charge of the meat department here. Both department heads plan to move to Marion.

Clocks who have been employed in the grocery department are all Marion residents. They are: Bill Fate, Danny Roeker, Willis Stewart, William Whitehoff, Jim McGrath, Ray Ealon, Kenny Kingsley, Marvin Hickins, Carl Taylor, Jim Harvett, Martha Dickson, John Dennis, Mary Alice Schroeder, Mable Haubert, and Harold Valentine. Mr. Apling said others will be hired later. Assisting in the meat department are H. E. Hambley, Sam Francis and Pauline Kidd.

Building Remodeled

The Big Bear store occupies a building owned by Zeb Stout which formerly housed the Danier Hulek Co. Since the Miller company leased the building from Mr. Stout, workmen have completely remodeled it. A modern sound proof ceiling, a mastic tile floor and tear drop lighting fixtures have been installed throughout the store, which measures 30 by 100 feet.

Since fixtures installed include "help yourself" refrigerated dairy cases and modern slant-front meat cases. Wheeled baskets may be used by shoppers. Five check-out booths have been constructed at the front. Three lanes running the length of the store are flanked by eye-level displays. More than 4,500 nationally-advertised products are handled.

Affluent to the building is a parking area, flood-lighted and available to shoppers.

Internal Problem Is Handicap to India's War Aid

By DEWITT MACKENZIE, Aids World War Analyst

The crisis revolving about British aid of dominion status, which involves the financial support of the war effort, has developed another difficulty—the Nationalist insistence on democratization of the states under the native princes.

If you were looking for examples of the antithesis of democracy you would find it among these beleaguered potentates whose wealth is so great that some of them don't know just how rich they are. This isn't, however, true of all of them (there are close to 500 princes and chiefs).

Two kinds of rulers

There are the two kinds of rulers. One is represented by the young maharajah whom I encountered in India—a wastrel who used to get enthusiastic on champagne and chase jackals across country in his Rolls Royce.

The other is a magnificent representative of the old India—the late Maharajah of Benares, who as a widely known statesman, devoted his life to the welfare of his people, and created a model state.

Now comes along Pandit Nehru, powerful political leader of the All-India Congress, and declares opposition to any plan for Hinduism which excludes the principles of the states under the princes. Mr. Nehru would have all the states ruled by a people's government, within the structure of federal India.

If you and I were placed in a position, possessed of money and power, we would want to keep it. We would want to keep it in the hands of our family and our friends. We would want to keep it in the hands of our family and our friends.

LABOR

Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, joined them in the broadcast.

Call Murray "Dear Friend"

Green referred to Murray as "my dear friend" and later as "my friend, my collaborator and fellow-American" in token, he said, of "this spirit of unity and collaboration" between the two labor organizations. Murray in turn expressed his "pride and personal gratification" to appear on the platform with Green and said their presence together "tells beyond words that we know this is labor's war."

"I come to you without reservation," Green said. "I am determined and willing to stand with President Murray and his associates."

Reluctant labor's determination to do its utmost to win the war, Murray said "we (AFL and CIO) propose to go down the long road hand in hand, working together toward attainment of our national objectives." He added: "You CIO men in this hall, collaborate and cooperate with AFL unions in your community."

Green gave the meeting an historical significance by saying: "This is the first time since the slight difference within the family of labor that two men, clothed with the responsibility of millions, are standing together pleading the cause of solidarity. Accept our presence here as symbolic."

Assure President

Both Green and Murray said the labor peace was effected at the request of President Roosevelt and Green added that they had "assured the President" labor would relinquish the right to strike voluntarily for the duration of the war.

"But we never will agree that the right to strike shall be taken from us by force," he thundered, answering what he termed attacks in newspapers and congress against labor.

Murray named Congressman Smith (D-Va.) and Cox (D-Ga.) as assailants of labor in congress and asked them with others whom he said fought labor to "have confidence in American labor, join labor, not stir us in the back."

Murray declared he "resents inferences on the floor of the American congress that labor is not patriotic. Labor has kept its pledge to shun strikes, increased efficiency, accelerated production. It is sweating, bleeding and dying to help win this war."

President and Nelson Differ on Wages

WASHINGTON, April 8.—President Roosevelt and his war production chief, Donald M. Nelson, differed openly today on the wisdom of wartime cash bonuses for workers who set a fast pace in vital arms industries.

Nevertheless, there were numerous signs that the hotly debated controversy over wages and hours might be edging nearer a solution, despite the continuing surface turmoil.

Mr. Roosevelt, intimating that there might be an announcement on the wage question soon, told his press conference yesterday that he was utterly opposed to the wartime bonus plan because men in such a national emergency ought to produce all they could. He added he also disapproved pure-work bonuses in peacetime.

Nelson, who endorsed the bonus

RELIEF NEEDS GROWING ACUTE

City Council Hears Outline of Situation by City Auditor.

Special to The Star.
April 8.—That the relief situation at the beginning of the year was growing acute and the city is now in a very serious position for the future, was the warning given by City Auditor E. C. Ferguson, in submitting his report of receipts and disbursements for the first quarter of the year at a city council meeting last night.

There are only two alternatives, according to his report, of relieving the situation. One is the raising of a bond issue, the other is the raising of a general fund. The auditor told council, "The city is now in a very serious position for the future, was the warning given by City Auditor E. C. Ferguson, in submitting his report of receipts and disbursements for the first quarter of the year at a city council meeting last night."

SEES CITIZENSHIP AS GAUGE OF GOVERNMENT

GUY MORSE BINGHAM

Speaker Points to Responsibility in Talk to Rotary.

Declaring that the American people are just beginning to realize that they must safeguard the privileges and advantages which freedom has given them, Guy Morse Bingham, speaker of the Marion Rotary club yesterday, said that "any government cannot be better than its citizenship."

Mr. Bingham, educator and lecturer who has appeared before Marion audiences on several occasions, spoke to the Rotarians following their weekly luncheon at Hotel Harding. His subject was "Citizenship Responsibility in America Today."

"Government is your responsibility," he said, and as evidence that this responsibility had not been adequately met he referred to records showing that little more than half the voters go to the polls.

The war emergency has awakened Americans from the state of indifference which existed over a period of years, Mr. Bingham said, and he designated the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor as a jolt which brought an awakening the country needed.

He was introduced to his audience by Wilson B. Tway, Rotary program chairman.

WILDCAT GOODYEAR STRIKE IS ENDED

Sit-Down Affects Work on War Production.

By The Associated Press.
AKRON, O., April 8.—A "wildcat" strike at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. ended today, restoring the flow of rubberized material to several thousand Goodyear employees producing such war products as balloons, blimps, rubber boots and bullet-sealing gasoline tanks.

The sit-down, involving pay rates, lasted about 12 hours. It began shortly after noon yesterday and ended at about 2 a. m. today after international officers of the CIO United Rubber Workers, who had declared the strike a wildcat affair, talked with the sit-downers.

The dispute affected 440 "spreader room" workers—110 on each of four shifts. A total of 330 participated in the sit-down before production was resumed at 2 a. m. Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the international union, headed the delegation which persuaded the workers to resume production. He announced termination of the strike.

Conditions of the resumption were not announced immediately. The sit-down began at noon yesterday when new orders, increasing the speed of the automatic fabricating machines and changing the number of attendants and rates of pay, became effective.

L. E. Judd, Goodyear spokesman, said under the new system one runner and one helper is assigned to each machine. Previously each helper had been assigned to two or three machines. Runners' pay was raised about two cents to $1.50 an hour, and a similar increase resulted in a rate of $1.45 for helpers, he asserted. The speed of the machines was increased as the result of a study, Judd said.

C. V. Wheeler, president of the union local, reported the strikers "said that when the company took the pay cuts down off the board, they would return to work." W. I. Vaughn, union treasurer, said the workers were protesting the new system, because in his understanding it meant a "setup in production and less pay."

"CANCER CONTROL" TALK HEARD BY 50

Columbus Pathologist Speaks at Medical Meeting.

An estimated 50 nurses and representatives of the Women's Field Army heard a talk on "Cancer Control" by Dr. Horace B. Davidson of Columbus, assistant professor of pathology in the college of medicine at Ohio State university, at a Marion Academy of Medicine meeting Tuesday night at City hospital.

Dr. Davidson gave the history, research, cause, diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

He said that cancer is not hereditary, is many-sided, nor is it due to bacteria. He said cancer is caused by injury, which may be chemical, a blow, or some other irritation.

Treatment, according to him, may be divided into three types: X-ray, surgery and radium. He commented that cancer is curable if begun soon enough.

Dr. Lawrence A. Pomeroy of Cleveland, secretary of the executive committee, and Miss Belle Grove also of Cleveland, who is state commander of the Ohio Division of Women's Field Army, a national organization of women devoting their time to educational work on the subject of cancer, were not able to appear at the meeting as scheduled. However, "Choose to Live," a film they were to present, arrived, and was shown by J. E. Frew, principal of Thomas A. Edison Junior High school.

It was announced that the academy will work with the Women's Field Army in an advisory capacity through a committee to be appointed later by Dr. J. G. McNamara, president of the organization.

In the absence of Dr. McNamara, who was ill last night, Dr. F. L. Thomas was in charge of the meeting, which was in keeping with the nationwide observance of "National Cancer Control Month," designated by President Roosevelt.

Garbage Disposal Plan Before Council

Special to The Star.

UPPER SANDUSKY, April 8.—City council is considering the installation of an incinerator for the disposal of garbage, here. This solution to the garbage disposal problem which has been a much discussed question for several weeks, was suggested to council by Wyandot county sanitation officer, Carl Miller.

F. J. Staller, city solicitor, has reported to the council that he believes they have the authority to issue general obligation bonds to finance garbage disposal.

A state health engineer will meet with council at its next meeting to explain the use of an incinerator and to compare it to other means of disposal.

Still unsolved is the problem of what to do about the city dump. Council has been notified its lease on the present site of the dumping grounds will not be renewed and efforts to find a new site have been unavailing.

Further War Profits Bill Action Postponed

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Congress, still much at odds on the most effective way to limit war profits, today postponed further controversy on the question until April 16.

The house originally approved a flat six per cent limitation, but the senate decided after much discussion yesterday to vest discretionary authority over profits in the secretary of war, secretary of navy and chairman of the maritime commission.

The senate wrote its decision into the $19,212,773,260 war appropriation bill, and returned the measure to the house for ultimate adjustment of the differences of opinion on the profit curb issue.

YEARLY CONTRACTS ISSUED BY BOARD

Marysville Teachers Not Given Continuing Contracts.

Special to The Star.
MARYSVILLE, April 8.—Although the Ohio supreme court declared the school tenure act passed at the 1941 session of the legislature as constitutional, the Marysville board of education declined to grant continuing contracts to teachers in the Marysville schools at the April monthly meeting Monday night.

The board instead voted to pass out yearly contracts and constructed Supt. H. W. Carr to deliver the contracts. The board awarded the contracts at the March meeting.

The yearly contracts were issued despite the fact that the former board last fall voted to issue continuing contracts. It was pointed out by L. G. Brubaker, president of the board, that the continuing contracts were not delivered to teachers following the action last fall.

The board gave its assent to the hiring of more than one teacher from a family. A resolution was passed several years ago prohibiting the hiring of more than one teacher from a family. This action was not overruled at Monday night's meeting but board members advised against the following of the resolution as an "emergency" measure.

No Restrictions on Building Under $6,000

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 8.—Severe as it is expected to be, the imminent war production board order curbing civilian construction will not affect the building of homes costing under $6,000 at designated defense housing critical areas, WPA officials said today.

In non-defense areas, the order which is due within the next 48 hours will mark the suspension of the civilian construction industry. WPA Director Donald M. Nelson said yesterday.

This will be accomplished by putting a low dollar limit—estimated as low as $500—on residential construction for which building materials could be sold or used.

Allergy in Children

Allergy is, as it is almost unnecessary to define nowadays, a state of hypersensitivity which some individuals have to certain foods, dusts, animal odors, plant pollens and various other substances. When these individuals come in contact with one of these substances, this hypersensitivity causes symptoms in various parts of the body.

Hay fever, asthma and hives, to name the commonest forms of allergy, are conditions of this type. Why some people have this hypersensitivity, and others do not is unknown, although it is quite definitely of an hereditary character.

Allergy may appear in persons in childhood or in later life. I have known of two sisters, one was afflicted with hay fever in childhood while the other was perfectly free from it until about the age of thirty when she too developed hay fever.

In children allergy takes several forms: they may have hay fever or asthma. They are particularly likely to have a peculiar reaction of the mucous membrane of the nose which becomes swollen and boggy and causes a running drainage and a chronic cold.

Another form of allergy in children attacks the digestive system and there may be attacks of disturbance of the stomach with cramp, a chronic gaseous distension and diarrhea followed by constipation.

One type of digestive disturbance due to allergy in children is cyclic vomiting. This comes on in attacks beginning in the prodromal period with loss of appetite, listlessness and irritability, languor and a little fever and then later, a pain in the pit of the stomach, gastric disturbance and finally the vomiting which lasts from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, followed by severe prostration. This does not occur in adults and the patient eventually wears it out. The average age of these patients is seven and one-half years and the symptoms appear periodically for three to four years. Sometimes they also have asthma and hives and other skin eruptions.

Another form of allergy which affects children almost exclusively is infantile eczema. These poor little tots about the age of one year begin to have raw, scaly, itchy areas on the face and hands which constitute a very distressing condition. No one can blame the baby for being irritable and touchy and unresponsive.

Both cyclic vomiting and eczema in children are probably due to food allergy, although it tries the patience of the parents and the doctor and all the relatives to find out exactly what food causes the attacks. It is usually a combination of some of the most necessary nutritional articles such as eggs, milk, bread, etc., and somehow or other these children with eczema always wear it out. I have never seen it persist beyond six or seven years.

To treat a child with this condition requires a great deal of patience in getting a good history and finding out what particular substance is responsible for the condition. Sometimes the al-

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Finds Real Prof. Diswell and Servant Bound and Gagged, as Knock on Door Is Heard.

THE depressing question concerning the whereabouts of Gus and the other men continued with me, as with eyes fixed upon the impostor's figure I stood against the wall, his face turned upward. It seemed to the table by which he had been standing and took from it the key to the door, which I had compelled him to take from his pocket and put there.

But though my muscles did not falter as I picked up the key, and with a quick backward glance to locate any furniture which might be in the way, began to slide toward the door, never taking my eyes from the figure silhouetted against the opposite wall, I was quaking inside as if with ague. I was wondering too whether it would be wise to unlock the door before Gus and his men should come up to it.

I ventured one quick glance out of the window as I heard it, but no living object was in sight, and I could hear no sound of struggle.

Tries Key in Door

In vain I reminded myself of my instructions to Gus, that one blast of my whistle would mean that all the men should come at once to the house, but would also mean that they should exercise caution in their approach. I could do with a little less caution, I now told myself bitterly, as I moved to the door. Standing sideways, so that I could keep one eye upon the man standing against the other wall, I inserted the key into the lock and turned it. Then I turned the doorknob and pulled the door ajar, just enough to reassure myself that the key was the right one.

But I shut and locked the door as quickly as I had opened it, keeping my hand upon the key, however, while with my other hand I gripped my pistol, still keeping it trained upon the man opposite me.

lurgens can be avoided or eliminated. It may be that the child has a pet cat or a rabbit which is the cause, or sometimes the stuffing of his pillow may be the cause of his complaint.

Other allergens are not so easily avoided, such as the pollens of trees, grasses, weeds, house dust and foods that are necessary for nutrition.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. H. "What do you take exact of witch hazel for?"

Answer: Witch hazel is a long outmoded counter irritant that has been used for rubbing on sprains and sore places. I do not know of any use for it, taken internally.

there came again that gurgling, choking noise. I knew what I had to do now. The mandate was heavy upon me. I could not help now the old professor who, I was sure, was making that ungainly noise, but at least I could assure him that help was at hand.

I withdrew the key from the lock and tucked it into my bodice pocket. Then, with my eyes fixed upon the man facing the wall, I went to the closed door of the room from which the cry had come, and threw it open.

I saw the man against the wall stir at the sound, and I spoke quickly, sharply.

Madge Gives Orders

"Keep your face against that wall!" I commanded. "I am watching you every movement."

"I wouldn't advise you to go into that room," he said, with a sneer in his voice. "It wouldn't be enjoyable for you."

"I am not going into the room now," said, "but you are, and then I shall follow you."

My voice was shaking with rage and horror. For my one quick glance into the room had shown me the contorted faces and bulging eyes of two grigiously tortured men, sitting on the floor against the wall with feet lashed together, hands tied behind their backs, cruel gags in their mouths and blood upon their faces and clothing. One of them was Professor Diswell. I was sure of that.

The other might have been the twin brother of the man outside who had posed as the gardener. The answer to that was easy. This was the real servant of Professor Diswell. The man outside had impersonated him.

I walked back to the man who had impersonated the old professor and standing behind him spoke with emphasis.

"I am keeping right behind you, so there is no chance for you to do anything but obey. You will now walk in front of me into that other room and untie those men."

I was cut short by a violent pounding on the outer door and a shout—

"Let us in this minute, or we'll break the door down."

He added that the American military leader "seems to be a kind of symbol of the democratic action for which the English people are seeking." He said the British were becoming impatient with their own leaders and demanding "offensive action."
